Good things come in threes: Marabu presents innovations at three high-profile stands

Düsseldorf, Germany
3 – 16 May 2012

Tamm, 6 March 2012 – Marabu is set to make a real splash at drupa 2012 in Düsseldorf – showcasing its latest innovations at not one, not two, but three high-profile stands in Hall 3. Stand A92 will focus on digital printing and liquid coatings, with the spotlight on UltraJet DUV-F, Marabu's brand new UV-curable inkjet ink for flexible substrates. This product is part of a comprehensive portfolio that includes the UV-curable Ultrajet range, TexaJet water-based sublimation inks, and the mild solvent-based Marajet series: a range of exciting products that are guaranteed to spark the interest of trade show attendees.

Next up is Marabu's appearance at the ESMA Screencity pavilion. As a founding member of ESMA, Marabu will showcase its screen printing inks in a dedicated presentation area within the association's pavilion. A new low-migration ink will make its international debut at Screencity: the UV-curable Ultrapack UVFP range, ideal for printing on the exterior of food packaging. Further highlights will include graphic screen printing inks and UV-LED-curable inks for container and label printing.

Last but not least, Marabu will be appearing in conjunction with Japanese printing press manufacturer Sakurai. Visitors will have the chance to watch a live demonstration of Marabu's UV-curable special effect inks, applied using the next-generation Sakurai Maestro cylinder screen press – and the excellent printing results are sure to wow spectators.

Marabu's three appearances at a glance:
